1. What is law, and why does business need it?

Law is the body of rules, enforceable by the state, that governs conduct within a society. For business, law provides the predictable framework within which transactions, agreements and disputes can be conducted and resolved — without it, no trader could rely on a promise, a debt, or a contract being honoured or enforceable.

Business law specifically covers the rules affecting how businesses are formed, how they contract with others, how they employ people, and how disputes between them are resolved.

Sample of the practice examination (Question One of Five)

Note on format. The full paper includes a complete practice examination laid out the way a real KASNEB ATD paper is laid out — timed, five compulsory 20-mark questions — so you can rehearse the exact exam format before sitting the real thing. This is an original practice paper, not a reproduction of any actual KASNEB past paper.
